Welcome to Gasline, which is produced by Gas New Zealand. In this issue, we take a look back at the LPGA’s 2015 training programme and assess their success. They have delivered a series of training courses that have provided opportunities to develop the knowledge and skills required to work in the gas industry.

The LPGA can be contacted by telephone (04) 914 1765, fax (04) 914 1766, or mail PO Box 1776, 6140, Wellington.

In this issue
- In this month’s column, Peter Jackson, chair of the PGDB, reflects on the work of the PGDB over the past year. He discusses the benefits of the PGDB’s stakeholder liaison group and the importance of continuing to work closely with industry participants. Peter also talks about the importance of regular dialogue with those we regulate.
- We have open lines of communication on relevant information, and to make a submission online.
- In this month’s article, we explore the issue of contaminants in LPG appliances. We discuss the history of the issue and the measures that have been taken to address it.
- We consider the issue of the Christchurch district plan and the potential impact it may have on the LPGA.
- We look at the topic of CPD and its importance in the gas industry.
- We consider the topic of alternative engine fuels and examine the viability of LPG as an engine fuel.
- We provide solutions to these challenges and also look at other ways to lower the entry barriers.
- Gasline can be accessed online, with training days being organised in person or online, with training days being organised in person or online.
- It’s important to have a regular dialogue with those we regulate.
